

Fiber Optic Connector Production Equipment

Summary of Content

Producing fiber optic connectors requires specialized equipment for fiber preparation, connector assembly, polishing, and testing to ensure low light attenuation and high-quality connections.

Fiber Preparation Equipment

Before connectors can be attached, optical fibers must be prepared. This involves cutting, stripping, and cleaning the fiber to achieve a high-quality end face.

Equipment used includes:

- Fiber cutting machines that create precise, clean fiber ends for optimal light transmission .
- Stripping tools to remove protective coatings without damaging the fiber.
- Cleaning stations with internal suction or ultrasonic cleaning to remove debris and contaminants .

Connector Assembly Equipment

The actual assembly of fiber optic connectors involves aligning the fiber with ferrules, pins, or sockets. Key equipment includes:

- Laser welding modules for high-precision fiber-to-connector connections, ensuring minimal light loss .
- Connector insertion machines that attach ferrules, pigtails, or housings to the prepared fiber.
