

How much does a fiber optic splice closure typically cost

Summary of Content

Fiber optic splice closures typically cost between $80 and $300 per unit, depending on type, capacity, and application.

Typical Price Ranges

- Inline closures: Generally used for connecting two cable segments in a straight line; prices usually start around $80 and can go up to $200 depending on fiber capacity and manufacturer .
- Dome closures: Common for buried or outdoor applications; these are more robust and can cost $150-$300 per unit .
- Butt closures: Used for terminating cable ends or branching; prices are similar to inline closures, typically $100-$250 .

Factors Affecting Price

- Fiber Capacity: Closures designed for higher fiber counts (e.g., 144 fibers) are more expensive than smaller 12-24 fiber closures .
- Application Type: Aerial, underground, or wall-mount installations influence the closure design and cost. Buried or high-density closures are generally pricier .
- Material and Features: Gel sealing, test valves, and high-density trays can increase the price .
- Brand and Supplier: Leading manufacturers like 3M, Tyco, AFL, and PLP Coyote may charge premium prices, while regional suppliers may offer lower-cost alternatives .
