

How much does cable tray manufacturing equipment cost

Summary of Content

Cable tray manufacturing equipment costs typically range from $110,000 to over $430,000 depending on machine type, automation, and production capacity.

Price Ranges by Machine Type

- Roll Forming Machines: These are the core machines for shaping cable trays. Prices vary widely based on tray complexity, material thickness, production speed, and automation level. Typical costs in 2026 range from $50,000 to $250,000 for standard models, with high-speed or servo-punching systems costing more .
- Cut-to-Length Machines: Used to cut trays to required lengths, these machines generally cost $20,000 to $80,000, depending on automation and precision .
- Bending Machines: For creating bends and angles, prices range from $15,000 to $60,000, influenced by tray size and bending capacity .
- Welding Machines: Spot and seam welding machines for joining tray sections or accessories can cost $30,000 to $100,000, depending on automation and production speed .

Factors Affecting Costs

- Automation Level: Fully automated systems with integrated control panels and servo-driven components are significantly more expensive than semi-automatic or manual machines .
- Material Specifications: Machines designed to handle thicker steel (2-3 mm) or wider trays require stronger structures, increasing costs .
