

Price of In-ground Optical Distribution Box

Summary of Content

In-ground optical distribution boxes typically range from $50 to $300 per unit, depending on capacity, material, and features.

Overview

In-ground optical distribution boxes are designed for fiber splicing, storage, and distribution in outdoor or underground environments. They are usually made of high-strength engineering plastics with UV and impact resistance, and often feature IP65 or higher waterproof ratings to protect fiber connections from moisture and dust . These boxes can accommodate multiple fiber cores, support PLC splitters, and provide organized cable management for feeder and drop cables .

Price Factors

- Port Capacity: Boxes supporting 12 to 24 ports are common, with higher port counts increasing the price .
- Material and Durability: Boxes made from reinforced plastics or composite materials with anti-aging and UV protection cost more .
- Installation Type: In-ground or buried boxes with reinforced housings are generally more expensive than wall-mounted or pole-mounted units .
- Additional Features: Integrated PLC splitters, adapter slots, and dual-layer designs for splicing and distribution can raise the cost .
- Brand and Warranty: Established brands offering warranties (1-2 years for fiber components) may charge a premium .
